THAW AT THE ASYLUM

Had the Honor to be at the "Knife and Fork Table"

ATE HEARTY BREAKFAST

And Told a Hospital Attendant he Expected to Remain Only About a Week.

HE IS IN EXCELLENT SPIRITS

Matteawan, N. Y., February 3.—Harry K. Thaw began Sunday the routine of a simple life which the authorities at the state hospital for the criminal insane say will make his long stay in the Tombs prison, in New York city, seem the height of gaity in comparison.

The new patient in the observation ward slept soundly Sunday night, the presence of the fifty other men in the dormintory not giving him the slightest concern. It was after the usual retiring hour when Thaw reached the hospital Sunday night and he immediately went to bed. He had enjoyed the trip from New York with his counsel, as well as the dinner at the hotel in Fishkill Landing with his counsel and one or two newspaper friends. Although the two deputies who accompanied him were guests at the dinner there was no suggestion of prison or asylum restrictions during the repast and Thaw found the occasion much to his liking.

He arose Sunday morning at 6 o'clock and ate a hearty breakfast at the "Knife and Fork Table." Only fifty-four men out of the more than 700 in the institution are allowed this privilege, the others being restricted to spoons. Thaw was much refreshed from his sound sleep and declared he needed the rest after the trying hours of Friday night and Saturday while the jury was out and seemingly unable to agree upon a verdict. About 500 men were in the main dining room when Thaw reached the breakfast table Sunday and he was the centre of attention. The novelty of the noted patient's presence had not worn off by dinner time and he was compelled again to eat under the scrutiny of many eyes. Thaw shared the hospital fare with all the others. His dinner included roast pork, potatoes, sauer kraut, bread, butter and coffee.

Thaw expressed a desire to attend divine service in the hospital auditorium. During the day Thaw declared to one of the attendants that he probably would not be in the hospital more than one week Thaw brought a large sum of money with him to the hospital, but finding he would not be allowed its custody, handed it to a newspaper man, who turned it over to his counsel.

REV. JOHN CRAIG DEAD.

Well Known Centre Countian Died on Wednesday.

On Wednesday morning death added one more victim to its list in the person of Rev. John Craig of Julian. Rev. Craig was well known throughout the county and made hosts of friends wherever he went. At an early age he displayed more than ordinary traits of character and as he advanced in years these traits were developed and strengthened until death forever ended his noble career. His smiling face will no more be seen on this earth by his many friends, but the deeds which he did will be remembered forever.

Deceased was about 74 years of age and a splendid christian. He was a member of Company C. 148th regiment, Penna. Volunteers, and was wounded at Deep Bottom or Po River, Virginia, in the Civil War. He received wounds in the neck, hip and in his leg below the knee. The last wound gave him considerable trouble having turned into a running sore which grew worse until 1896 when he had to have his leg amputated.

He suffered a stroke of paralysis on Sunday which caused his death on Wednesday morning.

The funeral services were from the house of his son Fillmore Craig, of Julian. Interment were made in cemetery east of Unionville on Saturday.

A THRILLING FIRE SCENE

Partially Destroys the Pretty Home of Mr. William Steel on Sunday Night.

It has been quite a while since this town has had the misfortune of having a big blaze, but on Sunday evening the citizens of this community were somewhat startled to hear the borough fire alarm sound its call. At the time, about 9 o'clock, many of our citizens were attending the services of their respective churches. The Methodist church closed its services and some of the other churches left out soon after. The people of course, rushed to the scene in great numbers as soon as it became apparent that the blaze was no small one. The fire companies both turned out quickly and did very commendable work. A number of those looking on thought the men were slow but the real fact the thing is that the crowd was restless on account of the cold, and did not seem to understand how great the blaze really was. Another thing which made it difficult to get the fire under control was the prevailing wind which was very strong at that point. The firemen, however got the blaze under control in good time and kept it confined to the one building.

It is stated that the fire was caused by the partition catching on fire in the cellar. The flames worked their way upward with amazing rapidity and soon broke out on the roof. To those looking on, it appeared that the flames started on the attic, while they really started in the cellar. They caused a great deal of damage to the interior and kept the firemen on duty nearly all night.

Mr. and Mrs. Steel were sitting in the sitting room when Mrs. Steel noticed smoke in the air and told her husband. On investigating Mr. Steele found his home to be on fire. He at once called the fire departments and went upstairs and wakened his two sons John and Harvey who had just gone to bed. The boys arose and quickly dressed and left their home at once. The other members of the family were all at church.

The house of Mr. Steele was one of the most desirable residences in this town and although his loss is probably all covered by insurance, Mr. Steel will never be able to make his home as nice and pretty as it was before. About the only things taken from the house were Mr. Steele's desk and some of his most valuable papers.

The fire was caused by the furnace, which had been overheated. The furnace is of the hot-air type and quite a big fire had been put in it on account of the extreme cold. The fire however, was made too hot and it started a very runious and costly blaze.

Aid was kindly given to the family by their many friends for which they are very thankful It is believed that the building will be repaired at once and this will mean quite a bit of work as the greater part of the interior is runined while the upper story is practically burned away.

We feel sorry for Mr. Steel but he should be thankful that his whole home was not burned to the ground as the flames had a good start on our firemen and the wind blew very hard. The recent snowfall, not only helped our firemen get the fire under control, but also kept it from spreading.

Adjudged Her Insane.

Last Saturday, Jan. 25, a commission in lunacy examined Miss Viola Teller, of Milesburg, who several weeks ago was sent to jail for threatening the life of Mrs. Lillie G. Reeder, and a verdict of insanity was given. At the hearing given Miss Teller before the first commission her answers and actions were so erratic that it left no doubt in the mind of every member of the commission as to the woman's mental condition. She denied that she made any threats on the life of Mrs. Reeder, or even that she had been with her on the day in question, as she claimed that Mrs. Reeder was one of her best friends and it was from her she got all her legal advice.

But after making the above statement she emphatically declared that Mrs. Reeder did owe her forty million dollars and to avoid paying her the money she had paid Dr. J. J. Kilpatrick, the dentist, twenty-five thousand dollars to kill her. When asked whether the doctor had done anything toward executing his alleged part in the bargain she said he often came down to Milesburg and would pound and pound on their house. Equally erratic as the above were her statements made about a number of Bellefonte people and throughout the entire examination she hardly gave one real sane answer to any question asked her. She was taken to the Danville Insane Asylum this morning.

IN CRAZY WOMAN'S GRASP

She Threatens to Throw Baby From Third Story Window

SAID TO BE INSANE

Thrilling Scene as Mother Waits for the Woman to Carry Out her Awful Threats.

THE BABY WAS SECURED UNINJURED

Pittsburg, Feb. 4.—Using the three-months'-old babe of Mrs. Mary Magaski as a shield, after she had made several determined efforts to throw it from a third story window Mrs. Susanna Bucha, said to be insane, was over-powered here Monday after resisting a squad of police officers throughout the night. Crazed with anxiety the infant's mother stood all night long on the ice coated pavement begging piteously for her offspring, while the Bucha woman, three stories above with the baby partially out of the window, threatened to let go if anyone attempted to enter the house.

Neighbors and friends stood by with blankets and coats prepared to catch the little one should the woman carry out her promise. The thermometer was hovering near the zero mark and the would-be rescuers chilled by the wintry blasts were forced to work in relays. The mother, however, refused to budge and not until her child was safe in her arms would she permit friends to lead her to her home. There she collapsed from exposure and is now in a serious condition.

Monday night the police received word that a crazy woman was trying to throw a baby out of a window. Rushing to the address they attempted to surprise Mrs. Bucha, but their efforts were fruitless. When the officers threatened to shoot the woman used the baby as a shield and begged them to fire. She threatened to drop the baby from the window when the police broke down the door to her room. Finally Lieutenant McCarthy slipped behind the woman and snatched the infant from her. She fought desperately to regain possession of the child and when other officers entered the room attempted to drink poison. Five men were required to subdue the woman, and after handcuffing her wrists and chaining her ankles she was taken to the police station. The baby was uninjured.

MISS ELLA J. McCLAIN.

Died at 6 O'clock Saturday Morning of Typhoid Fever.

Miss Ella J. McClain, one of the most highly respected ladies of this town, died Saturday morning at 6 o'clock. Her death was due to typhoid fever which she contracted on Thanksgiving Day.

She was well known in this vicinity and her hosts of friends will greatly miss her. Deceased was born in this town, and has resided here for the past 48 years, and it is with regret that the citizens of this town must be satisfied to think only of her deeds and be no more allowed to view her living body.

She was an active member of the St. John's Catholic church and belonged to the societies known as the Rosary, the Sacred Heart, and the 3rd. Order of St. Dominic.

Left to survive her are her mother Mrs. Nora McClain and the following brothers: James, of Spangler, Frank and Bernard of this town.

The funeral services were held at 10 a. m. Monday in the St. John's Catholic church. Rev. P. McArdle officiated and interment were made in the Catholic cemetery.

Died at Dr. Feidt's.

Mrs. Mary P. Smith, of Shippensburg, but who has been staying with her niece, Mrs. Dr. Feidt for the last two years, died at the residence of Dr. Feidt Thursday morning. Deceased was 56 years of age, and was a faithful member of the Methodist church. Her husband died about three years ago. She took a stroke of apoplexy about two years ago and since that time she has been feeble but did not take another stroke until Friday and this morning she died as a result of the stroke.

The funeral services were held at Shippensburg on Saturday.

HOSPITAL BENEFIT.

Dr. Thomas C. VanTries Gives an Interesting Recital.

An event that has been looked forward to with considerable interest by the citizens of Bellefonte was the recital given by Dr. Thomas C. VanTries in the Court House on Friday evening, January 31st, subject "Eminent Men and Women Whom I have seen and Heard." Owing to the inclemency of the weather and to the fact that the Court house was not very well heated caused by an accident at the Steam Heat works, the audience was not as large as it should have been. But those present went there expecting some thing fine and they were not disappointed. The talk was interesting and instructive throughout and at times eloquent. Dr. VanTries in his long and useful life has had the opportunity to meet and listen to some of the greatest men and women not only of this country but of England. By his talk Friday night he showed that he had profited by this, and his wonderful memory enabled him to recall many interesting anecdotes and reminiscences of those he had seen and heard. Among the men he had listened to are John B. Gough, the great temperance orator; Sam Jones, the Evangelist; Bishop Philip Brooks, Wendell Philips, the anti-slavery orator; Will Carleton, the poet, Theodore Tilton, T. DeWitt Talmage, Henry Ward Beecher, Horace Greely, Belva A. Lockwood, Wm. H. Seward and Abraham Lincoln. He wound up his talk with Lincoln's famous speech at Gettysburg.

Dr. VanTries had the attention of his audience from start to finish and at its close Gen. Beaver moved that a vote of thanks be extended to Dr. VanTries for his entertainment, not only for the pleasure it gave the audience but also for the hospital whose building fund was benefited.

The collection was taken up and it netted the Bellefonte Hospital $16.56 which amount was turned over to the Treasurer, W. Harrison Walker Saturday morning. The only expense was the printing of the bills, Dr. VanTries giving his services free of charge.

To any who missed hearing the lecture we will say that you missed a treat if ever the opportunity is offorded you to hear it in the future you should take advantage of it.

The Borough Fathers

At the regular meeting of the Borough council Monday evening, President Keller was in the chair and the following members present: Kirk, Shuey, Wazner, Beezer, Brown, Hamilton.

On account of the cold weather the repairs to the Hibler pavement were not made as yet. As soon as the weather permits the repairs will be made.

Fire and Police committee reported the fire at William Steele's Sunday night. The firemen deserve congratulations and thanks of council for the way they turned out and worked at this fire.

The treasurer's report showed a balance in his hands of $956.82. This is something unusual.

The matter of the incandescent light on East Linn street near the Bower residence was laid on the table.

No New Trial for Donley.

William S. Donley was at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon sentenced to be hanged with Judge Hall and Associate Judges Harris and Bressler on the bench

The motion for a new trial was argued at length by Messers. Kress and McCormick, counsil for the defense, and was opposed by Henry Hipple, Esq., for the commonwealth.

The court, after a short consultation announced the result of there deliberation, it being the unanimous opinion that the defendant had received a fair and impartial trial, and had been given the benefit of every reasonable doubt.

RESCUE OF SHIP'S CREW

37 Men Taken From Burning Ship in Snow Storm

TWO BADLY BURNED

The Story of the Rescue is one of the Most Sensational in the History of Wrecks Along the Atlantic.

FOUGHT FIRE FOR THIRTY-SIX HOURS

Boston, Feb. 5.—The White Star liner Cymric was due here from Queenstown Tuesday with the thirty-seven rescued Monday from the burning steam-ship St. Cuthbert, off the Nova Scotia coast. The story of the rescue is one of the most sensational in the history of wrecks along the western North Atlantic coast. It was accomplished in a blinding snow-storm and every rescuer faced death constantly. The Cuthbert was a steel-hulled vessel of 4,950 tons and carried a general cargo.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the storm abated slowly and the officers of the Cymric decided to lower a boat. It was manned by First Officer Stively and a crew of six stalwarts. They manoeuvered, executing brilliantly, and the boat reached the Cuthbert protected by the copious use of oil. A heavy figure was lowered, followed by another and then twelve descended the ladder. The horror-stricken passengers and crew then saw the inmates of the returning boat blackened with smoke. Two, Captain Hawke and a sailor, were frightfully burned on the face and arms. These two injured men were helplessly beaten against the ships's sides when they were hoisted by a loop under their arms. They had many wounds and a hand's breadth of skin fell from Hawke's face as it was dressed. The sufferers received every care and their wounds proved superficial. Nearly everybody had the soles of his feet burned besides bruises.

W. C. PATTERSON

Celebrates His 70th, Birthday on Friday

There was quite a reception given W. C. Patterson, head of the Agricultural Department of State College, in honor of his birthday Friday.

In the afternoon a special reception was given him and it is stated that over 500 people were present at least a part of the time. Among these people were many from Bellefonte, some of whom were James Harris, Charles M. McCurdy, J. Calvin Meyer and wife, Judge Ellis L. Orvis, Gen. James Beaver, Emanuel Noll, Jno. P. Harris and wife, J. L. Spangler, C. C. Shuey, Gen. Jno. I. Curtin, S. H. Williams, Hermon Miller, Hammond Secbler, W. H. Musser, Thos. Donachy, Hon. Jno Noll, Amos Garbrick, Geo. R. Meek, Col. Jas. P. Coburn, and S. H. Bennison, of Howard.

He was presented with a beautiful loving cup, having three handles and being of a very beautiful design. Resolutions were made by many, showing their appreciation of what he has done for them

The resolutions presented and read were received from the State College trustees, the faculty, the alumni, the students, and the employees. Also from State College business men, and the Methodist church, Mr. Patterson is one of the leading men in that church. Also from the G. A. R., and the business men of Bellefonte. Many individuals sent him resolutions, but these were not read, not because they were not appreciated as well but because the time was too short.

It was certainly a fine reception enjoyed by all present, and to close the whole affair light refreshments were served to all who wished them.

The Death of John W. Lutz.

It is with extreme regret that we chronicle the sad death of John Wilson Lutz the young son of Jacob Lutz of near Fillmore, which occurred last Saturday afternoon at 2 o,clock. The young man was ill only a few days and death was due to pneumonia.

The deceased was born near Fillmore and was aged 14 years and 5 months. He is survived by his father, mother two sisters and a brother. The funeral took place Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the Presbyterian church at Fillmore. The free Methodist minister officiated. Interment in Meyers cemetery.

THE ACADEMY BANQUET.

Foot Ball Squad and Prominent Citizens Guest of Jas R. Hughes at the Brockerhoff House

Mr. James R. Hughes tendered the annual banquet to the Bellefonte Academy foot ball squad at the Brockerhoff House Friday evening. In addition to the Academy boys present Dr. J. Allison Platts, Col. J. L. Spangler, Thomas J. Harter, Prof. John D. Meyer, Henry C. Quigley, Esq., Francis Speer, Professors Arthur Sloop and Sherwood Hall and Rev. Jas P. Hughes all of the Academy Faculty were present and added much pleasure to the occasion by the good, hilarious spirit they infused into it and by the excellent "toasts" they gave. The hotel dining room looked beautiful and attractive with the musical decorations of gold and white—the symbolic colors of the Academy—and the novel decorations in the Athletic colors of gold and blue above and upon the long table. About thirty guests were seated about the festive board enjoying the delicious menu which Mr. Ray so well knows how to prepare, while Deitrick's orchestra furnished delightful music which proved a fitting inspiration for the occasion. The guests having done their full duty in putting out of sight all that came in sight in the edible line, the second part of the program which is always anticipated with pleasure—the "toasts"—were then introduced by Mr. James Hughes, who always presides as toastmaster at these interesting events. Much mirth and fun mingled with serious and helpful thoughts made these toasts a treat and benefit to all present. The speakers and their subjects were as follows:

"The Team and It's Record"—Oakley Pantall (Capt)
"The Alumni--Before and After"—H. C. Quigley, Esq.
"Athletics in School Life"--John Wagner
"Our Jolly Fellows"—Prof, Arthur Sloop
"Students and Journalism"—Francis Speer
"The Favorable Side of Football"—Arthur Aikens,
"The Faculty"—Prof. Sherwood Hall.
"Trips and Their Pleasures"—Wayne Smith
"Opportunity"—Thomas Harter.
"Our Girls" -Thomas Thomas
"Populus Nobiscum"—Prof. John D. Meyer.
"Bellefonte Without the Academy"-Col. J. L. Spangler.
"Brighter Prospects"—Edward Lyon.
"Education and Progress"—Dr. J. Allison Platts.
"Fond Recollections"—Rev. James P. Hughes.

Taken all in all this was probably the most successful banquet ever tendered to the foot ball warriors of the Academy, and it is proper that it should be so, for never has the Academy had football material of which she could be more proud. Here's to you all for even greater success another season.

GEORGE W. HOMAN.

Died at his Home Near State College Thursday Night.

George W. Homan died at the old Homan homestead near State College Thursday night. He had been suffering for over a month from a complication of diseases and about two weeks ago he got typhoid fever. It is probable that the typhoid fever was the main cause of his death, although the other diseases hastened it considerably. Deceased was one of the most respected citizens in that community and had hosts of friends throughout the county. He was a typical farmer having made quite a record in his community as a wide awake, modern tiller of the soil. He took an active interest in all questions relating to the welfare of the vicinity in which he lived and during his life-time he filled many of the township offices, having been auditor at the time of his death. He was a christian man and belonged to the Lutheran church, assisting religious work whenever chance offered an opportunity. He was a deacon in the Lutheran church and also held many offices of honor at time of his death. His many friends and the citizens of that vicinity will greatly miss this man who took such interest and active work in the general upbuilding and welfare of his community. Deceased was 65 years of age.

Left to survive him are his wife, six children, three brothers and three sisters.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Aikens, of Selinsgrove, Rev. Bergstresser and Rev. Stonecipher on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment were made at Pine Hall.

A HORRIBLE MURDER

A Chicago Man Shoots His Three Little Children.

MURDERER ARRESTED

The Only Excuse Given Was that His Home Was a Hell, and That the Children Would Be Better Off Dead.

ONE DEAD AND OTHER TWO WILL DIE

Chicago, January 31.—William H. Meutech, a carriage maker at 419 Armitage avenue, Thursday shot and killed one of his daughters, 5 years old, and fatally wounded his two other children.

The cause of the crime is not known but according to the public, Meutech had recently quarreled with his wife several times, because of the children. The carriage shop was beneath the rooms in which the Meutech family lived, and late Thursday the man called Gertrude, the oldest daughter, telling her to come to the carriage shop. As she stepped through the door Meutech fired a bullet into her abdomen, killing her instantly. He then called Jennie, 3 years old, and shot her as she entered the shop. William, the 2 year old son, was the last victim to be called and his father shot him above the heart as he came in. The two children were taken to a nearby hospital where it was stated that both of them would die. Mrs. Meutech and an older son were up stairs at the time and heard the shots, but paid little attention to them. A short time after Mrs. Meutech saw her husband walking in the back yard carrying the dead body of Gertrude, and the unconscious form of Jennie in his arms. She at once telephoned to the police. In the meantime, Meutech placed the children on the floor of the basement and locked himself in a small closet.

Police Captain Harding and Lieutenant Lynch broke down the door and arrested Meutech after a short struggle.

The murderer is believed by the police to be of unsound mind. He confessed after his arrest that that he intended to kill another daughter, 18 years old, who was absent when the tragedy occurred.

Meutech said to Captain Harding:

"The children are better off dead than alive, and under the care of such a mother. She cursed at them and home was a living hell. My 18 year old daughter left home three months ago because of domestic troubles."

Idleness Leads to Crime

There is very little sympathy in this world for the hardened criminal who is caught at his nefarious work and taken to jail; but often there is the most sincere sorrow, when youth is found in the prisoner's dock or in the felon's cell.

The evil habits which lead to theft and other crimes are usually bred by idleness; therefore, one of the best ways to keep the young out of mischief is to keep them employed. This, however, in the case of some boys, is very difficult, as they show their aversion to honest toil and will shirk it, at every opportunity; so that in many instances, it is unfair to censure parents for their apparent failure to train their boys to habits of industry; some boys will not train that way.

It would be a great thing for every boy, if the thought could be impressed upon his mind that the evil is not only the most expense in every way, but that it will prove to be the most laborious; for no trial, like that which is assigned to criminals in the penal institutions of the country, can be found, anywhere outside of the prison walls. The life in the jails of the land is one of servitude; yet all crime leads to employment in these institutions; the life of virtue is the happiest and easiest in every way.

Gets Marriage Offer From Leap Year Girl.

The first feminine proposal of marriage under the license which leap year allows has been received by O. B. Warren, a young clerk of York. He is holding it under consideration.

The letter, which he received from an admiring young woman at Manchester, York county, reads;

Dear Sir—Having seen you several times, and having heard that you were unmarried, I have taken the opportunity that leap year offers to girls to ask for your hand. I want to make you happy, to bring sunshine into your lonely life; also add unceasing pleasure to my own. Now I sincerely hope that you will not treat this as a mere joke, but take pity on us girls, who are just as lonely as yourself, I am positive that I can make you quite happy; also hope that you will not be so selfish as to refuse my proposal. Awaiting an early reply, I remain impatiently, Miss—.

Mr. Warren gallantly refuses to reveal the name of this fair petitioner.

A WOMAN'S WAY.

By Gertrude James.

Copyrighted, 1908, by E. C. Parcells.

The Jim Crow mine had been shut down for repairs, and its engineer, Frank Burton, was free to take a vacation. His sister, Olive, had come on from New York to join him in the outing, and young Taylor and Williams were to make up the quartet for a mountain camp.

When supper had been eaten one night at Andy's stage house, halfway on the journey to the site selected, and while the night grew blacker and the rain fell steadily, all sat in the room which was office, bar and smoking room combined.

By and by the girl was asked to sing. There were the grim mountains shutting them in. There were the black night and the falling rain. There was the feeling, at least on her part, that she was shut out from the world. These things sobered her. She felt the awe of them, and after a bit she softly sang:

"Nearer, my God, to thee, nearer to thee,
E'en though it be a cross that raiseth me;
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer to thee."

No one sang with her. The hymn was a surprise to all, even to herself. The last words were dying away when from the veranda in front and through the open door and window came the second verse, in a rich, deep voice, of that hymn which has made more women weep and more men reflect than any other written by human hand. Every one looked up, but no one moved hand or foot.

When the singer had finished, they heard a light step on the veranda, the creak of a saddle, and there was no longer any one outside. There were only the darkness and the pouring rain.

"My poor house is honored tonight," said the landlord, with a laugh. "First, the lady from New York; second, Happy Harry. If I had champagne I'd open a bottle."

"A THOUSAND PARDONS FOR THE INTRUSION."

"Happy Harry, the road agent!" shouted all the men in chorus.

"The same. He meant to turn in here, but the sight of the young lady scared him. A modest and retiring young man is Harry. I didn't know before that he could sing. He'll have to shelter in a gulch somewhere tonight."

The notes seemed to be echoing about the room yet and floating out of door and window to lose themselves among the crags and peaks and storm clouds, and the girl sang in a voice scarcely above a whisper:

"Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer to thee."

"He has held up more stagecoaches than any other three men combined," resumed the landlord as he looked around with something like pride in his face. "Reg'lar daredevil, but not bad at heart. Got the birth and breeding of a straight out toff. Guess he ain't in the business for money, but out of recklessness. You can gamble that he's got a history back in the east somewhere."

"Then you don't call him a real bad man?" asked the girl somewhat anxiously.

"Bless your heart, miss, but could a real bad man sing that there hymn with the feeling he did? There was almost a sob in his throat as he finished, and wild horses couldn't have dragged him in here to show his feelings. They'll catch or kill him sooner or later, and I for one shall be sorry for it."

For an hour the talk ran on about the man who had come and gone so mysteriously, and the girl was a silent and sober listener. The wind had risen to a gale, and the door and window had to be closed against the driving rain.

She was thinking of the loneliness and discomfort of him they talked of—of what he was and what he might have been. Then when some one remarked the lateness of the hour Miss Olive walked to the window and peered out into the night and sang again:

"There let the way appear steps unto heaven.
All that thou sendest me in mercy giv'n;
Angels to beckon me
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer to thee."

Next day the camp was pitched in a long, narrow valley, with the grim mountains coming close down on each side and the ends lost in the hazy distance. A colored man followed them from Virginia City to do the cooking and after things were running smoothly the engineer and his companions began hunting and prospecting. Ten days had passed, and the men were away one quiet afternoon when the girl, swinging lazily in her hammock and looking up at the grim peaks, felt a feeling of awe and reverence stealing over her and softly sang:

"Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer to thee."

And lo! From close beside her a voice repeated the last two lines of the refrain and brought her out of the hammock and upon her feet in an instant.

Leaning against a tree scarce two yards distant she saw a young man of less than thirty, with his cap in his hand and a smile of apology on his bronzed and handsome face. He was roughly dressed, and yet the garments did not fit him ill.

"A thousand pardons for the intrusion," he said as he bowed low.)

"You—you are the man who sang at Andy's, and you are hurt," she said as she took a step forward.

"Only a bit of an accident, miss—two or three ribs broken by a fall from my horse. I know this place. Up behind the big bowlder there is a cave. I wanted to lie up in there for a couple of weeks and give these ribs a chance to mend. Of course I did not know you were here. A thousand pardons. I will go elsewhere."

"No. You shall go up there, and I will see that you are made comfortable. The colored man shall bring you everything needful. Go at once before some one comes. Please go!"

The man smiled and bowed and took his way up the hillside, and Moses, coming up just then with a supply of fuel, was told of the stranger's presence and pledged to aid and secrecy. A flask of brandy was filled, bedding and food flung together, and these things he carried up to the cave.

An hour later a sheriff's posse arrived, but they made no discoveries. The man they had been trailing for three days seemed to have vanished off the face of the earth.

On the afternoon of the fifth day, all the men being away again, the girl climbed the hillside, and, sitting down beside the bowlder with her back to the cave, she said to the man inside, who gave her greeting and protested his gratitude:

"You must have had a home—father, mother, brothers and sisters perhaps?"

And then he told her his story—told it to a human being for the first time. It was the old, old story—pranks at college, a stern father, an obstinate son, harsh words, the going away from home with a heart full of bitterness.

"And, now, when you are better?" she asked as his story was finished.

"I've been thinking. I shall do no more of it. I may go back and take my place in the world again. I have not taken human life and am not beyond redemption."

"God grant that you go back!" she fervently exclaimed. "I think there are spies around the camp, and I dare not come to you again. If you go at night, when all is quiet, give me a sign, a sign that you are going back to those who must still care for you—to honesty, honor and respectability."

He promised. At midnight five nights later a terrible storm swept the mountains and the valleys again. There was no sleep for any one in the camp until the storm passed away and the stars shone again.

The last lingering raindrops were falling upon her tent when a sound caused the girl to rise from her couch and part the flaps of her tent and look out. From up the hillside, where its clothing of firs still glistened with the wet, came the words of the refrain:

"Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer, my God, to thee;
Nearer to thee."

"What is it, Olly?" asked the brother as he looked out of his own tent, and his query was echoed by the young men.

The girl did not answer. There were tears in her eyes and a sob in her throat. Happy Harry was going away. He had given her the promised sign. He was going home to father, mother and sister, and the mountains and valleys would know him no more.

Submarine Cables.

The very first suggestion that was ever made about a submarine cable was that made in the year 1795 by the Spaniard Salva before the Academy of Sciences at Barcelona. Two years later Salva proposed to connect Barcelona and the island of Majorca by a submarine telegraph line. In 1803 Aldini, nephew of the celebrated Galvini, made some interesting experiments in the transmission of electric signals under the sea near Calais, France. In 1812 Schilling ignited powder by electricity transmitted through a submarine wire under the Neva, near St. Petersburg. John Sharpe in 1813 transmitted electric signals through seven miles of insulated submarine wire. It was not till 1838 that it was demonstrated that submarine telegraphy was practicable. In 1843 Samuel Colt was operating submarine cables between New York city, Coney Island and Fire Island. In 1851 the first important submarine telegraph was opened for business by a company of French and English capitalists.—New York American.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

To All Who Love their Fellow Creatures.

Fellow citizens there is due need of help in many homes in this town and vicinity.

We have an agency in our midst which, in the name of Him who suffered for us, are, with slender means, trying to relieve some of the suffering resulting from the present stringency and aggrevated by the severe season. The Salvation Army has done much with the meagre financial transport they received.

They reach and are able to find and relieve want that would never be brought before our overseers or spread before the public. We make this appeal not for them, but for the suffering ones of whom they know. Will you not help them who are helping really needy. One who has thoroughly investigated the workings of the Salvation Army and who loves the cause of humanity.

A CITIZEN.

Praises the Philadelphia Press.

In a letter dated Chambersburg, Pa. December 20th 1907, addressed to the editor of "The Philadelphia Press," W. F. Hill writes as follows:—

"SIR:—The membership of the grange organization everywhere throughout the State very highly appreciate the splendid report you gave of the work done by their representatives at the annual meeting held last week in West Chester. On their behalf, I take pleasure in tendering to you the thanks of their organization and assure you that the able work of your reporter (Miss Woods) and your support of our work, was very highly appreciated."

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery" was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients—Golden Seal root.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that he could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, so generally employed. So the now world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery," for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the strongest endorsement from the leading medical experts, teachers and writers on Materia Medica who recommend them as the very best remedies for the diseases for which "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised.

A little book of these endorsements has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to the Doctor as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompained with catarrhal discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, or hang-on-coughs, and all those wasting affections which, if not promptly and properly treated are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

Lock Haven Has the Meanest of all Mean Thieves.

One of the meanest of all mean individuals lives in Lock Haven, according to reports received by the police of that city and if sufficient evidence should be secured against the party to whom suspicion now points, he should be given the extreme penalty of the law and that as speedily as possible.

Sometime during Wednesday while preparations were being made at the home of George Myers on East Water [illegible] who met with such a shocking death near her home, and while Mr. Myers is so badly injured that he is almost helpless was being administered to, some sneak thief, devoid of all feeling or sense of shame, who was in the house in the guise of a friend, stole Mr. Myers' pocketbook containing $13, which was all the money there was in the house. It is unlawful and mean to steal from those who can easily stand the loss, but the man who will take the last cent, as it were, from the home of a poor, needy, hardworking man, while he is helpless in bed, and his wife lies in a casket in another room, with three sobbing young orphan children awaiting to follow the remains to their last resting place, would think nothing of murdering his own kinsmen in order to gain a few paltry dollars. Such a man ought to be ostracized from society the remainder of his life, and it is sincerely hoped that the police will succeed in fastening the crime on the right party.

Canvas Glove Factory for Centre Hall.

A few weeks ago it was announced with authority in these columns that a factory of some kind would be started in Centre Hall within a short time, but the nature of the article to be manufactured was not made known at that time. Tuesday the Reporter was informed by Merchant G. O. Benner, who with his brother-in-law, John B. Miles, of Martha are the promoters, that the proposed plant will manufacture canvass gloves and mittens—a half dozen styles—and the firm will also become one of considerable importance.

Most of the machinery for the cutting and stitching of the gloves is now on the ground and in a short time will be set up and put into operation. Before the close of the present month the first canvas gloves, and mits will be turned out of the Centre Hall factory.

Gloves and mits made from canvas are extensively used in all parts of the United States. The product is retailed at ten to fifteen cents per pair, and better grades at a higher price. The help needed to manufacture this line of goods is of a grade that can easily be furnished in a country town like this, and there is no reason why the modest factory about to be started by the energetic gentlemen named should not grow into one that will make Centre Hall famous. Success to the undertaking.—Centre Reporter.

PRESIDENT FLAYS CRIMES

Replies to Critics in Most Vigorous Special Message

SHOW MUCH CONCERN.

Large Attendance in the House to Listen to the Reading of His Message to Congress.

A NUMBER OF RECOMMENDATIONS.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1st—The special message of the President to Congress on the subject of the employers' liability act and injunctions in labor cases was presented to the Senate a few minutes after 12 o'clock on Friday. When Mr. Latta, assistant secretary to the President, entered the chamber there was but a handful of Senators present. The Vice President at once tore open the big envelope containing the message and handed it to the assistant secretary of the Senate, who immediately began its reading.

Printed copies of the message were delivered by Latta and were distributed to Senatorf precent. Many of them appeared to satisfy themselves concerning the nature of the message by scanning the printed document so that before its reading was half finished they very generally took up other matters and only a few followed the reading carefully until its conclusion.

As the reading of the message was proceeded with and when the striking passages were reached, many of the Senators looked around the chamber and exchanged smiles. Mr. Tillman seemed especially pleased with the document. Senator Lafollette paid very careful attention to the reading of the message and frequently his countenance indicated special interest

The reading of the message in the House of Representatives was listened to with intense interest, the members of whom there was an unusually large number in attendance.

As the reading of the message progressed in the House numerous members were heard audibly to exclaim "most unusual," "this is red-hot," etc.

The President's vigorous denunciation of wrongdoers was greeted with loud applause, as was his defense of Federal judges who punish offenders for violations.

The President makes a number of recommendations to Congress, among which is the adoption of an employer's liability law confined to concerns doing an interstate business, to meet the objects on which the Supreme Court recently knocked out the law adopted by the last Congress.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect it.

Prevalency of Kidney Disease.

Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalency of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are the most common diseases that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patient and physicians, who content themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease undermines the system.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

ONLY ONE.

The Record in Bellefonte is a Unique One.

If the reader has a "bad back" or any kidney ill and is looking for relief and cure, better depend on the only remedy endorsed by people you know. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve quickly—cure permanently. Bellefonté citizens testify to this. Here is a case of it:

Mrs. Emma J. Davis of E. Logan St. Bellefonte, Pa. says; I have a great deal of confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills, and have already recommended them in a published testimonial in 1897. I told how I had been relieved of kidney complaint and backache which had kept me suffering for years. Doan's Kidney Pills did this for me when other remedies had failed. Whenever I feel any symptom of my old trouble I send to F. Potts Green's drug store for a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and it never requires more than a few doses to get me right."

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

No Case on Record

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken. It stops the cough and breaks up the cold quickly. Refuse any but the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in a yellow package. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Dr. Miles' Little Early Risers The famous little pills.

Good Cause For Tears.

A certain mediaeval sultan had all the mirrors removed from his palace, so that he might avoid the pain of seeing his own face. This sultan called on his grand vizier one day and by accident happened to catch sight of his reflection. His hideousness overpowered him, and he broke into violent sobbing. In this outburst the vizier joined. Finally the sultan calmed down, wiped his eyes and got ready to smoke and talk. But not so the vizier. He sobbed on and on. His master, tapping his slipper impatiently on the cushions, waited for him to cease. At length the sultan got angry and exclaimed:

"Why do you weep longer than I, vizier?"

"Alas," the grand vizier replied, "you wept, O commander of the faithful, because you saw your face but for an instant, but I see it all day and every day."

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

FOR RECORDER OF DEEDS.

State College, Pa., Jan. 21, 1908.

Editor Republican:

Please announce in the Bellefonte Republican my name as a candidate for the nomination for the office of Recorder, subject to the rules governing the Republican party.

Very Truly Yours,

JOHN L. HOLMES.

FOR CONGRESS.

We are authorized to announce the name of Capt. Charles F. Barclay, of Cameron Co. as a candidate for Congress, subject to the action of the Republican primaries in the 21st Congressional district. Rep-tf.

BARCLAY FOR CONGRESS.

In this weeks issue of the Bellefonte Republican will be found the announcement of Capt. Chas. F. Barclay, of Cameron county, as a candidate for Congress in this congressional district, subject to the decision of the Republican voters. Capt Barclay is now serving his first term and the record he is making is a good one. Capt. Barclay is the first real live representative this district has had since the days of Andrew G. Curtin and is a credit to his constituency. If Capt Barclay is given a second term which we believe he should have without opposition he will be able to accomplish something for this district. About all we have had in the past from his predecessors was garden seeds. He has done more for the old soldier in the way of pensions than any congressman in years. By all means re-elect Capt. Barclay.

Problems In Fiction.

Reverence for decorum and even for social prejudices did not hamper the real masters of the English novel. It did not stifle in the cradle "Vanity Fair" or "Wuthering Heights" or "Diana of the Crossways" or "Adam Bede." There are problems enough in all these works, but they are handled by men and women of genius, who treat both their subjects and their readers with respect.—London Standard.

How They Love Each Other.

"Yes," said Miss Passay, "he's an awfully inquisitive bore. He was trying to find out my age the other day, so I just up and told him I was fifty. That settled him."

"Well," replied Miss Pepprey, "I guess it is best to be perfectly frank with a fellow like that."—Philadelphia Press.

A Good Job Coming.

Jeweler—How was your boy pleased with the watch I sold you? Fond Father—Very well, sir. He isn't ready to have it put together yet, but be patient. I'll send him around with it in a day or two.

Interests of All.

One thing ought to be aimed at by all men—that the interest of each individually and of all collectively should be the same, for if each should grasp at his individual interest all human society will be dissolved.—Cicero.

Changed His Taste.

The Empress Eugenie, whom Napoleon III. chose to share his throne, had a ready wit, which, although it never veiled a sneer, often confused those on whom it was directed. The late Dr. T. W. Evans tells in his reminiscences the story of a distinguished senator, who, on being asked what he thought of the speech in which Napoleon had declared his marriage intention to the deputies, replied:

"A fine speech—excellent! But I prefer the sauce to the fish," meaning that Napoleon's words were better than his choosing of a bride.

Some weeks later, at a dinner given at the Tuileries, this senator was seated next to the empress, who, observing that after having been helped to the turbot he declined the sauce, said to him, smiling roguishly:

"Monsieur, I thought it was the sauce you liked and not the fish."

With rare presence of mind the senator hesitated but a moment.

"A mistake, madam," he said, "for which I am now trying to make amends."

The Corner Days.

Some aged country folk like to take note of what they call the corner days—the 20th of March and the 20th of September—when the sun crosses the line and the days and nights are of equal length and the 20th of June (the longest day of the year) and the 20th of December (the shortest). After the 20th of June they say, "When the days grow shorter the weather grows hotter," and after Dec. 20, "As the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen."

Levi Beebe, a noted old weather prophet, who used to watch the weather from his eyrie on Beartown mountain, southern Berkshire, Mass., made prophecies which were greatly prized. He made his prognostications from a study of the winds, the clear, cloudy and stormy days for ten days each side of the corner days and multiplied them by 3 to tell the weather for each succeeding quarter, and he made some marvelous guesses.—New York Press.

Time and the Man.

Some one may suggest that if Cromwell and Napoleon Bonaparte and Bismarck and George Washington and Abraham Lincoln had not appeared to do the work they did others would have arisen equally capable of doing it, though perhaps in a different way. To this suggestion there are two answers. One is that it is pure conjecture. The other answer is that history shows us many occasions when the great man was needed, and when the need of him was acutely felt, and yet when he did not appear. The greatness of some men is largely due to favoring conditions. Other men, perhaps more brilliant, achieve less than their powers seemed to promise because they were not quite in key with their own age. Perhaps they were ahead of it.—James Bryce in Pall Mall Gazette.

Great Events From Little Causes.

While staying at the court of Frederick II. of Prussia Voltaire presented Mme. de Pompadour's compliments to the king, who scornfully replied, "Je ne la connais pas." Out of vengeance for so much insult, as she deemed it, madame induced the weak-minded Louis XV. to convert his country's long standing hostility against Austria into friendship. A Franco-Austrian army then took the field against Prussia, and as it was an easy matter for madame to enlist the practical sympathy of Elizabeth of Russia, who had been the subject of Frederick's indiscreet remarks also, half a million lives were lost.—London Notes and Queries.

He Came Back at Her.

"Many mendicants," said a New York charity official, "are humbugs, and we do well to refuse their requests for help. What excellent digs, though, they sometimes give us in return. I remember the case of a farmer's wife who refused a tramp a night's lodging.

"'Well, then, ma'am,' said the tramp, 'would you mind if I slept in that big meadow there behind your barn?'

"'No,' said the woman, 'you may sleep there if you like.'

"'One thing more, ma'am,' said the tramp, 'before I say good night. Will you please have me called at 4 o'clock sharp? I want to catch the cattle train to market.'"

Italian Diet.

The low resisting power of the Italian, even among the more favored classes, to the assaults of disease has long been ascribed to the profession of the well nigh farinaceous and leguminous fare on which he subsists—the call on the heart in the later stages of pneumonia, for example, too often finding inadequate response from the defect of the muscle forming constituents in the diet of the patient.—London Lancet.

Geography.

"I'd like to see that young Japanese prince."

"A Japanese prince! Where is he?"

"Oh, he's traveling incognito."

"Is he? I'm so dreadfully weak about geographical names. That's in Manchuria, isn't it?"—Chums.

Physical Geography.

The following answer was recently given in a geography examination in reply to the question, "From what direction do most of our rains come?"

Most of our rains come straight down, but some of them come sideways.

A Safety Match.

"Papa, what is a safety match?"

Mr. Henpecked (looking carefully about to see if his wife is within hearing)—A safety match, son, is when a baldheaded man marries an armless woman!

He Wanted to Burn Them.

Husband (looking up from his paper)—What asses men can make of themselves!

Wife—What is the matter now, dear?

H.—I am looking at the love letters in this breach of promise case.

W.—Are they interesting?

H.—Interesting? They are absolutely sickening. Hear this: "My dear ducky," "My lovely dovey." Ha, ha, ha!

W. (demurely)—It does sound rather foolish, doesn't it?

H. (with a burst of laughter)—Foolish? Idiotic, you mean. It's the worst nonsense imaginable. To think that any man in his senses could write such stuff as this: "I send you a million kisses, my goosie poosie, sweety peety!" Ha, ha, ha!

W.—Perhaps he loved her when he wrote those letters.

H.—Suppose he did! Is that any excuse for writing such bosh?

W.—Yes, it should be. Here are some letters I found today when looking over my old relics—relics of courtship. They are very foolish, but very precious to me, I assure you. They are your letters. One of them begins, "My ownest own preciousest little ducky darling, my"—

H. (hastily)—That will do. Put them in the fire.—London Scraps.

Gunpowder.

The explosion of gunpowder is divided into three distinct stages, called the ignition, inflammation and combustion. The ignition is the setting on fire of the first grain, while the inflammation is the spreading of the flame over the surface of the powder from the point of ignition. Combustion is the burning up of each grain. The value of gunpowder is due to the fact that when subjected to sufficient heat it becomes a gas which expands with frightful rapidity. The so-called explosion that takes place when a match is touched to gunpowder is merely a chemical change, during which there is a sudden evolution of gases from the original solid. It has been calculated that ordinary gunpowder on exploding expands about 9,000 times or fills a space this much larger as a gas than when in a solid form. When this chemical change takes place in a closed vessel the expansion may be made to do a work like that of forcing a projectile along the bore of the great gun or test tube in the line of least resistance.

Why Snow Is White.

The reason snow is white is that all the elementary colors are blended together in the radiance that is thrown off from the surface of the crystals, which may be examined in such a way as to detect these colors before they are mingled together to give the eye the impression of whiteness. The whiteness of the snow is also in some degree referable to the quantity of air which is left among the frozen particles. Considerably more than a thousand distinct forms of snow crystals have been enumerated. These minute crystals and prisms reflect all the compound rays of which white light consists. Pink and various other tints may be seen reflected from sheets of snow under certain angles of sunshine. So much light is reflected by snow in the day that the eyes often suffer from it, and enough is given in the night to guide the traveler in the absence of artificial light or moonlight.—Chicago Tribune.

The Eleventh.

Archbishop Usher was once washed ashore from a wreck off the coast of Ireland. Almost destitute of clothing, he wandered to the house of a church dignitary and asked for shelter and aid of a brother clergyman.

"How many commandments are there?" inquired the other, thinking to detect an impostor.

"I can at once satisfy you that I am not the ignorant impostor you take me for," replied the archbishop. "There are eleven commandments."

"No," was the sneering comment; "there are but ten commandments in my Bible. Tell me the eleventh and I will relieve you."

"There it is," said the archbishop; "'a new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another.'"

Holding His Job.

Michael Callahan, a section boss for the Southern railroad, has a keen Gaelic wit. One warm afternoon while walking along the railroad tracks he found a section hand placidly sleeping beside the rails. Callahan looked disgustedly at the delinquent for a full minute and then remarked:

"Slape on, ye lazy spalpeen, slape on, fur as long as you slape you've got a job, but when you wake up you ain't got none."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Run of Luck.

Ruffien—Old fellow, you look blue. Are you on the wrong side of the market? Trumbull—Market be hanged! I moved yesterday. The van man broke £5 worth of the furniture. I lost a five pound Bank of England note, the gas company held me up for double the usual deposit, and I've just been summoned on a jury.—London Mail.

Got the Cart Before the Horse.

Rich Uncle John—Ah, is this one of your children? Agitated Mother—Yes, Uncle John, that's our little Johnnie. Kiss your uncle, dear, and then go and wash your face.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Little Hint.

Mrs. Knicker—Henry, do you think a camel can pass through the eye of a needle? Knicker—Dunno. Do you think the eye of a needle can pass through a button?

The Wife of the Cat.

Nasr-ed-din, the Persian shah, was an intensely superstitious man and believed that his luck lay in his beautiful black Persian cat, which was a remarkably handsome cat in a land where cats are nearly all handsome. The shah never allowed the black cat to be away from him, and it was given in charge of one of his wives, Amin Agdas, who was styled "the wife of the cat."

When the shah went on his long shooting expeditions, the Persian cat was put into a decorated basket and carried by a special attendant directly behind his master. Unluckily one day an accident occurred, and the black cat came to an untimely end. The shah was in despair at the loss of his luck bringer, but the clever "wife of the cat" exerted her influence and brought her nephew under the shah's notice. The lad was sharp enough to make the most of an accident (planned by his aunt) and save the shah's life, and the monarch was so pleased that he gave the boy the name of "the cherished of the sovereign" and installed the new luck bringer.

Perilous Boating.

On the west coast of Ireland, near the mouth of the river Shannon, are several large sea caves which open into each other. The visitor seems to be floating through a submarine palace of many halls whose roofs are either as green as grass in the sun or blood red. But the visitor needs a good guide and a good boatman, for the sea is insidious and the labyrinth of caves intricate. On one occasion, writes Aubrey de Vere in his "Recollections," soon after a party had entered the boatman suddenly shouted, "Bend down your heads for your lives!"

No one saw any danger, but the boatman felt the placid water insensibly rising and knew that the tide had turned. At last the visitors knew this, too, for it was not until the boat had ascended within a few inches of the roof that it began to descend.

"Pull your best!" exclaimed the man at the helm. "If the second wave reaches us, we are lost!" But before the second wave reached the cave the boat had issued from its mouth.

"To Eat Crow."

Although the use of the expression "to eat crow" in a metaphorical sense, meaning to eat one's words, may well have dated from the time of Noah, when the bird was first looked upon as unclean and not fit to serve as food for man, it seems to have arisen from the old tale of the officer and the private.

A soldier, having shot a tame crow belonging to one of his officers, was discovered by the owner with the bird in his hand. Seizing the private's gun, the officer commanded him to eat the bird as a punishment. With the firearm pointed at his head, the soldier fell to, but no sooner had the officer laid aside the gun than the culprit grasped it and compelled his superior to join in the distasteful banquet.

The private was court martialed the next day, and when he was asked by the examiners what had occurred he replied, "Nothing, except that Captain Blank and I dined together."—Washington Star.

College Chums.

A rich and well known citizen of an eastern city boasts of an extraordinary collection of books wherein the authors have inscribed their autographs.

It is rumored that the envy and frequently the skepticism of his friends have been aroused by the flattering inscriptions in question, and some cynics have even gone so far as to hint of a similarity in handwriting throughout the collection.

The citizen recently purchased a rare edition of Montaigne's essays. One evening at dinner the costly volume was passed from hand to hand, and for a time the owner lost sight of it. When, however, it did finally come back to him he was astonished to find on the fly leaf this inscription:

"To John Blank, From His Old Friend and Classmate, Mike Montaigne."—Harper's Weekly.

Reading a Pig's Tail.

"Don't buy that pig," said the older butcher hastily.

"Why not?" asked the younger man.

"Look at his tail," was the reply. "See how loose it hangs, like the tail of a rat. That is a sign that the animal is in bad health.

"You can read a pig's condition by its tail. The tighter it is curled the fitter is the pig. And when the tail hangs straight, as this one does, the pig ought to take to his bed and send for the veterinary."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. I.

Dr. Hartman is now offering Peruna to the public as a regular pharmaceutical product. It is just as ethical as any compound put up for the medical profession. No straining of medical ethics can find any fault with it. THE PRINCIPAL ACTIVE INGREDIENTS are prominently incorporated in the label on the bottle, that the people may know that the claims made for Peruna have a true justification.

The only departure we shall make from medical ethics in the conduct of Peruna affairs in the future, is the fact that we shall continue to advertise and sell our product TO THE PEOPLE.

If we would agree to sell to doctors only, to advertise for doctors only, then the medical fraternity would be obliged to recognize Peruna as being entirely within their approval.

BUT WE SHALL NOT DO THIS.

We shall continue to offer Peruna to the people. We shall continue to convey to the people our claims for Peruna as a household remedy. We shall continue to supply the people with free literature, teaching them how to use our medicine, teaching them how to avoid disease, teaching them many things of benefit to the home. We shall continue to do this, whether the medical profession like it or not.

We are proposing from this time on to take the public into our confidence. Notwithstanding that some imitators and substitutors will be attempting to put up something which they consider just as good as Peruna, we are going to draw aside the veil of secrecy and allow any one who chooses to know exactly OF WHAT PERUNA IS COMPOSED.

This ought to disarm all honest criticism. We expect, however, that criticism will continue. On some pretext or other those who are envious of the success of Peruna will continue to find fault. But we are determined to give such people no just complaint.

People Who Object to Liquid Medicines Can Now Secure Peruna Tablets.

PERUNA IS A GREAT MEDICINE.

It has become a household word in millions of homes. Our faith in the remedy is stronger than ever. Every year we expect to establish new plants in foreign lands until the people of all the world are supplied with this valuable household remedy.

WE CLAIM PERUNA TO BE A CATARRH REMEDY. Buy a bottle and try it. If it helps you, be honest and acknowledge that it has helped you.

If you want us to we will publish your statement exactly as you furnish it to us. We will add no words, take away no words. If you wish us to we will publish your portrait in connection with it. We will not do this without your written request, without your entire consent.

Peruna has cured thousands of people of chronic catarrh, in many phases and locations. At least, that is what the people say to us, through unsolicited testimonials. Peruna will cure many thousand more, in spite of fabricated slanders to the contrary.

WE GUARANTEE EVERY BOTTLE OF PERUNA TO CONTAIN THE INGREDIENTS PRINTED ON THE LABEL.

We guarantee that every testimonial we use is absolutely true—in the exact language of the testifier.

We guarantee that every photograph published is the photograph of the person whose name it bears, that every word of every testimonial was authorized by the hand that signed it.

We are determined to beat our opponents by being fairer than they are, by dealing squarer than they dare to. We are determined to meet falsehood with truth, duplicity with candor, insincerity with sincerity.

We know that the users of Peruna will appreciate our stand. We believe that the dealers in Peruna will applaud our course. We expect even our opponents will be obliged to acknowledge finally that Peruna is not only an honest and useful remedy, but one of the GREATEST HOUSEHOLD MEDICINES ON THE CONTINENT.

BURGLARS ROB ORPHAN ASYLUM.

Secures $100, Gold Chalice and Other Articles, Creates Panic and Escapes.

One hundred and fifty little white-gowned children were aroused from their slumbers and the Sisters terrified Thursday night at the Holy Family Orphan Asylum in Emeworth by a daring burglar, who broke open the tabernacle in he chapel, securing a gold chalice, and tole $100 from the Sister Superior's room.

The vandal was detected while at work and jumped from the window of the sacristy to a porch and, sliding down a support, escaped.

While he was in the house one of the nuns clanged the fire gong, which aroused everybody in the house. Excitement, almost resulting in a serious panic, followed.

Mother Valentine, the superior of the convent, and several sisters in the recreation room at 9:45 o'clock, after the children had retired, heard a noise in the chapel in the rear of the building and started to investigate. While they cautiously went along the broad balcony the chapel door was slammed. The fire alarm was then sounded by one of the sisters. The children, who have been taught to obey its clang, rushed to the lower hall from the dormitories.

Being unarmed the sisters feared to open the chapel door. When they heard one of the windows open they went into the church. A man dressed in a black suit and wearing a light colored cap jumped from the window sill just as the sisters peered into the room. He dropped on the tin-covered roof of the porch, slid down the porch post and ran from the grounds.

Half an hour later the sisters mustered up sufficient courage to make an inspection of the building. Some of the children were almost frantic with fright and it was impossible to get them to return to bed.

Sister Valentine found all the drawers in the bureau of her room had been forced open and ransacked. A pocketbook containing $100, contributed in several Polish Catholic churches on Christmas for the orphans, was gone with other articles of little intrinsic value.

The tabernacle in the sacriety had been forced open with a bar or jimmy and the receptacle for the blessed sacrament taken by the marauder.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

Up to the past week or so very little ice could be put away; but owing to the extreme cold weather, lately, an abundance of that commodity has been stored away, so that the whole community ought to keep cool during the "hot campaign" of this year.

Quite a quantity of snow fell in this locality, in the past few days, and with the force of the high winds, many drifts were formed, which made travel impossible until the road-master and his "gang" applied themselves to the task of cutting through them.

Snow Shoe.

Mr. Chauncy Leathers of Beech Creek spent a few days with his parents in this place. Chauncy looks as stout as ever.

Mr. Harry Beatse of Pine Glenn attended the dance at the park on last Wednesday evening. Everbody enjoying themselves while the thermometer registered 2 miles below Pan cake.

Mr. Sinecka Croft of Pine Glenn transacted business in our town on Saturday. Sinn is quite a stranger.

A young man saw Mr. D. in Thompson & Watsons Store the other night and he asked him why he wasn't down at Clarence and Mr. D. said, that he quit going to Clarence. Perhaps he has got a reason. How about it Mr. D?

That dreadful month of Feburary is here and came with full blast, 1st, 2nd, 3rd bringing the worst snow storm that we have had for many years. Sunday being Ground hog day and the sun shined so brightly that he saw his shadow.

Bluebell and Crandell were out fox hunting one day last week but they didn't get any foxes.

George Watson who has been employed at Osceola is back at his old job, breaking.

Mr. Brady Beightol of Moshannon transacted business in our town on Friday.

There was quite a fire at the Lehigh mines 2½ miles east of Clarence at a place called Poorman Side mines. There was a Hungarian family in the house. They hadn't much time to move it being Friday morning and that being the coldest morning we had this winter the thermometer was 21 below zero. The loss will be covered by the insurance.

Mr. Jacob Frantz who has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks is some better at this time.

Prof. D. O. Etters was in our town last week visiting our schools and attended our local institute Friday night Saturday.

We had quite a big snow here on Saturday again, just about three weeks ago we had a snow that measured 18 inches,

The ice is pretty good now and every person is trying to get some up for this may be the best we will have this season.

Sunday H. C. Woodring the liveryman started one team with a party for Stormstown and failed to get their on account of the snow drifts, also another party failed to get through to Reese Hollow,

Mr. Blake Thompson of this place had taken their marketing to Philipsburg on Saturday and was compelled to stay there over night, he started for home Sunday morning at 8 o'clock and arrived home at 5 in the evening, a distance of 12 miles through the snow.

Our local institute was fairly well attended considering Saturday such a stormy day. There were teachers from Unionville, Julian, Martha, Hannah, Stormstown. The topics were instructive as well as interesting to all who attended both old and young.

Woodward

Some Theatrical Jokes.

In a performance of "The Lady of the Lake" the actor who took the part of Roderick Dhu was known to be in pecuniary difficulties. When Roderick gave the line, "I am Roderick Dhu," Fitzjames responded, "Yes, and your rent's due too." On the production of a piece called "The Spy" the early acts showed that it was going to prove a failure. So when at a certain point a character had to rush on and shout, "Five hundred pounds for the spy!" the author-actor, who was concealed behind a rock, arose and cried, "It's yours—copyright, manuscript and parts!" That was the end of the performance.

When eating takes place on the stage, the temptations to play tricks with the food are naturally great. In "Henry V." the leek which that inimitable braggart Pistol has to eat is usually made from an apple. But on one occasion at Sadler's Wells the Fluellen of the evening gave him a real onion, and he had no choice but to struggle through it, though the tears coursed down his fat cheeks.—Cornhill Magazine.

Saved His Goldfish.

When a Bavarian peasant treats himself to a new hat, he does not throw the old hat away. He just puts the new hat on top of the old one. The other day an amusing scene was witnessed at the Munich railway station. A peasant who had bought a new hat and a bowl containing several goldfish found himself hustled by the crowd surging at the entrance to one of the platforms. In the crush the bowl was broken, and the fish fell out. For a moment the peasant knew not what to do. Suddenly he made up his mind. He snatched his two hats from his head, and, picking up the lively fish, he put them inside the old hat, which he then filled with water at the nearest water tap. Carrying the improvised aquarium, the ingenious peasant entered his train smilingly, but very carefully.—Munich Cor. London Globe.

Silent and Dramatic.

The most dramatic of silent men was Wallenstein, the antagonist of Gustavus Adolphus and the commander of the emperor's armies in the Thirty Years' war. He insisted that the deepest silence should reign about him. His officers took care that no loud conversation should disturb their general. They knew that a chamberlain had been hanged for waking him without orders and that an officer who would wear clanking spurs in the commander's presence had been secretly put to death. In the rooms of his palace the servants glided as if they were phantoms, and a dozen sentinels moved about his tent charged to secure the silence the general demanded. Chains were stretched across the streets in order to guard him against the disturbance of sounds. Wallenstein's taciturnity, which made him shun speech, and his love of silence, which caused him to be irritated at the slightest noise, were due to his constitutional temperament. He never smiled, he never asked advice from any one, and he could not endure to be gazed at, even when giving an order. The soldiers, when he crossed the camp, pretended not to see him, knowing that a curious look would bring them punishment.

English Sporting Parsons.

To the London Times a correspondent writes: "Once when a duke of Grafton was thrown into a ditch a young curate who had been closely competing with him for pride of place shouted, 'Lie still, your grace,' and cleared him and his hunter and the fence at a bound. So pleased was the duke with the performance that he declared he would give the young divine his first vacant living and not long afterward carried out the promise, vowing that if the curate had stopped to pull him out of the dike he would never have patronized him. 'Sporting parsons' are still to be found in almost every county today who can hold their own in the first flight when hounds run hard and some of the keenest fox hunters in all times have been supplied from the ranks of the clergy. Even the warning against their 'hawkynge, huntynge and dansynge' in the reign of King Henry VI. appears to have had very little effect."

A Very Mad Dog.

A little girl came running to tell about a mad dog she had seen. "We saw a mad dog!" she gasped, but the words seemed too tame to do justice to the situation. "Oh, he was mad, mad!" she added, frowning and pumping her fists. "He was furious!"—Harper's Weekly.

A Thinking Part.

The Old One—In adopting a theatrical career you are entering a touchy and jealous profession. Keep guard over your tongue. The New One—Oh, I've found out that I'll have ample opportunity to think before I speak!—Puck.

European Sensation.

"A Waltz Dream," the Viennese Operetta by Oscar Straus, is the only recognized competitor to "The Merry Widow" in all Europe. Just opened at the Broadway Theatre New York, after a phenomenal run abroad. The New York Sunday World will print the music of this world famous Waltz from "A Waltz Dream," in the colored magazine section, Sunday, Feb. 2nd. arranged for the piano. Everybody will want it. Order a Sunday World from your newsdealer in advance. This is one of the prettiest waltzes of recent years and a close rival of the "Merry Widow" given by The World last Sunday.

ANNUAL STATEMENT.

Following the custom of Centre County papers the Bellefonte Republican have had their mailing list reset and the date to which your subsciption is paid will be found opposite your name on the label. We believe this will be a great convenience to our subscribers enabling them to see at a glance just when they are paid to. Quite a number of our readers are in arrears and we know this would not be the case had they received statements of their accounts.

The expenses of running a newspaper have increased greatly during the last year. White paper alone costs 50 per cent more than it did one year ago. Other expenses have increased accordingly. At this time of year all business houses make an effort to collect bills so as to meet their obligations promptly and start the new year square. We hope during the month of January to send a statement to every subscriber in arrears, but you don't need to wait for this. Send in your money and make your label read '08 or '09.

Remember the subscription price is $1.50 per year but if paid in advance it is $1.00

THE PUBLISHER

Americans are known as a dyspeptic people. The extent of this disease may be inferred from the multitude of so-called "medicines" offered as a remedy. They are often in tablet form and have no value except as palliatives of the immediate effects of dyspepsia. The man who uses them may feel better but is surely getting worse. They do not touch the real cause of the disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a medicine specially prepared to cure diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It is not made to give temporary relief but to effect permanent cure ninety-eight cases out of every hundred it cures perfectly and permanently.

Writ to Dr. Pierce Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet giving all the ingredients contained in his medicines, which have been so widely used for the past forty years, and the opinion of eminent medical authorities indorsing these ingredients. In Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery pure, triple-refined glycerine is used instead of alcohol to extract the medicinal virtues from the roots and preserve the same unimpaired in any climate.

It has cost Dr. Pierce $25,000 to give away in the last year the copies of his people's Common Sense Medical Adviser which have been applied for. This book of 1008 pages is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Pickle Man Leases Farms.

Heinz, the Pittsburg pickle man has leased the Dunbar and Kunkel farms, near Middletown, Dauphin county, embracing 250 acres, which he will begin to fertilize at once for growing vegetables. This means the employment of from 100 to 300 men the year round, after the first crop. During the harvest fully 300 will be required for gathering, packing and shipping the vegetables.

The sucess of the enterprise depends largely upon the company's ability to secure sufficient labor when it is needed and upon this also depends in a great measure if a factory is to be located there. If the land can produce vegetables according to the company's requirements, and if labor sufficient to operate it can be employed, a large plant will be erected, and instead of shipping the product it will be handled in the east

COMPOUNDING A FELONY.

By Colin S. Collins.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Homer Sprague.

"I don't see why your father objects to me," cried Dick Rand. "I'm sure he cannot object to my character, my business position or my social standing, and he admits that he liked me until I asked his permission to marry you."

"He still likes you," explained Rhoda earnestly. "It's simply that he does not want me to get married, Dick. You see, he wants me home with him."

"That's just what I want," said Dick viciously. "I've some rights in this matter. Of course I don't blame him for wanting you, too, but you can't be expected to become an old maid just because your father wants you to remain single."

"I should not marry without his consent," she said softly.

"You'll marry and with his full consent if I have to waylay him with a gun some dark night and cry 'Your daughter or your life' at him," declared Dick, with a chuckle.

Rhoda did not share his mirth. Horace Hartsell, her father, was a stubborn man, not easily moved from a decision. When she was seventeen, he had declared that Rhoda was far too young to marry, and to that declaration he had clung, though Rhoda was now twenty-two.

More than one aspiring suitor had been warned off by the gruff old man, whose tenderness exhibited itself only in an engrossing affection for his daughter.

Long before an interest had really developed into love other eligible young men had been scared off, but with Richard Rand these tactics were unavailing. He loved Rhoda, and he was as determined to win her as was her father that she should not be won.

Mr. Hartsell had exhausted all of his customary expedients long since, and for the first time a young man had been able to gain Rhoda's love and her consent to marriage.

Hartsell had taken a grim satisfaction in refusing his sanction. He knew that Rhoda would never marry without his permission, and Dick had just come from the library, still smarting under the injustice of his dismissal.

Rand did not linger long with Rhoda. He was afraid that he might be led into some injudicious speech, and presently he left the house and made his way downtown. He dropped into the Frivolity, the vaudeville theater. Ben Graham, the manager, was an old chum, and Dick frequently dropped in to carry him off to supper after the performance.

Tonight he found Graham busy at a typewriter. "Just a minute," called the manager as he looked up from his work. "I'm writing the home office. Go inside and look at the pictures."

"I'm tired of pictures," declared Dick, but he stepped through the door leading to the auditorium and leaned against the rail at the rear of the seats watching the motion pictures.

He became so engrossed that he did not realize Graham's approach until the lights went up and the audience began to stream up the aisles. Graham waited for the house to be closed and then led the way across the street to their favorite haunt.

Dick's gloominess had disappeared, and for an hour or more he sat at the table laughing and joking in a manner far from suggestive of a lover who has just been told that he must not wed the girl of his heart.

Horace Hartsell was far more worried than was Rand. When business took him to New York he sent Rhoda to visit relatives until his return and then hurried home because a friend wrote him that Dick had left town.

But Rhoda was safe at her aunt's, and Dick did not return for ten days. When he did come, he was more jaunty than ever, and there was something positively gleeful in his manner when he dropped into Horace Hartsell's law office the day following his arrival.

He found the lawyer just about to leave for home, and together they descended to the street in the tiny elevator.

"Come over to the Frivolity," pleaded Dick as they reached the sidewalk. "There is something I want you to see."

"No, thanks," was the brusque reply. "I don't like those specialty shows. It's a waste of time."

"This is something very special," insisted Dick.

"Nothing to interest me," declared Mr. Hartsell. "I have some papers to read over for Blatchford. I promised to give him an opinion in the morning."

"You won't come?" demanded Dick.

"Certainly not!" was the irritated response.

"On your own head be it," said Dick solemnly as he turned away. Something in the tone alarmed the elder man. He turned his steps to follow Dick, and presently they entered the deserted lobby together.

Graham was apparently waiting for them, for at their approach he led the way into the empty auditorium. In response to his shouts a white curtain was dropped on the stage, and from the balcony above came the whirring noise of the projecting machine.

On the screen, in flickering letters of light, appeared a legend announcing that the dives of New York would be shown. In a moment this gave way to an interior that fairly represented one of the drinking resorts known all over the country by name and reputation, or lack of it.

Seated at the tables were gay parties, and the lawyer gasped as at the nearest table he perceived a figure so like his own that it might have been his twin.

"Been having a mighty good time in New York," chuckled Dick as he turned to Mr. Hartsell. "I thought you'd like to see this film before Graham puts it on next week. Wait for the rest."

"Is there more?" was the reply, accompanied by a gasp of horror.

"Lots," said Dick tersely. "You must have been making a night of it."

In succession half a dozen other pictures were shown, in most of which Mr. Hartsell's double appeared. As the last picture flickered and vanished from the screen the lawyer turned to the manager.

"If you run those pictures I'll have you prosecuted!" he cried. Graham smiled, but it was Dick who spoke.

"That would be a splendid advertisement," he reminded. "Just the way to invite attention to your good time."

"It was not my good time," protested Hartsell, with emphasis.

"How many people do you suppose would believe that statement?" said Dick as his smile broadened. "Your very emphasis would lend color to the belief that it was you."

"What can I do?" asked Hartsell hopelessly as the truth of the remark impressed itself upon him.

"You might buy them," suggested Dick. "I own the only negative and the only positive made."

"Name your price," spluttered the lawyer. "It's nothing short of blackmail, but I suppose it is better to submit."

"I'm glad to see that you take a sensible view of the matter," said Dick. "I don't mind admitting that I posed for the pictures myself. I'm rather good at amateur acting, and I studied you for a week. They will cost your consent to Rhoda's marriage."

"I shall use that explanation when you show the pictures," said Mr. Hartsell as he turned away. "You have overreached yourself and have provided me with a defense."

"If you do, I shall say that I am merely doing it to shield my father-in-law to be," said Dick. "Then every one will believe that I am nobly taking the blame for your indiscretions. You know they will."

Unfortunately for his peace of mind, Mr. Hartsell did know that Dick's explanation would find credence, but he was not yet willing to give in. Dick forced an issue.

"Take another look at them," he urged. "They might help convince you that, even at the price, they are cheap—that one in the opium den, for instance, where you choke over the smoke from your pipe."

Howard Hartsell raised his hand.

"Come home to dinner and fix it up with Rhoda," he said weakly. "It's compounding a felony, but"—

Dick smiled as he took from the operator the two tin cases containing the films.

"It beats the gun method," he whispered to himself.

How He Kept Faith.

He is a very small boy, but he has a very much smaller sister, a wee baby, who arrived only a few weeks ago. The small boy was delighted. Never had he seen anything so little or so interesting.

Could the baby see, could she hear, could she eat, did she have teeth, and why didn't she talk and walk? Those were a few of the questions he asked. Answers not being altogether satisfactory, he began a personal investigation. He opened the baby's eyes when she was asleep to see where her eyes had gone to anyway; he opened her mouth in search of teeth, and it was here that the family came to the rescue, and the small boy was told that he could never visit his baby sister without clasping his hands closely behind him.

"He loves the baby so that he stands by the half hour just looking at her," said the proud mother of both youngsters to a visitor. "And he is so honorable that he never thinks of taking his hands from behind his back. Just come and see him now." But as the two entered the nursery mamma gave a wild scream as she rushed for her baby.

There was the small boy, his hands clasped tightly behind his back, to be sure, but the baby not having responded to his challenge to play he had taken her silence for consent and was bumping heads with her.—New York Times.

He Knew of but One.

Many years ago De Scott Evans, the artist, took a trip to Jamaica, and upon his return to New York he exhibited a number of pictures that he had painted during his outing.

One day a man who had been looking through the studio stopped before a certain picture and asked:

"What does this represent?"

"That," said Mr. Evans, "is a scene in Jamaica."

"Jamaica?" echoed the visitor. "That's strange. I don't remember ever seeing anything like that in Jamaica."

"You have been there, then, have you?" the artist inquired.

"Oh, yes! I live there."

"Well, you surely must be acquainted with this place then. It is a street scene in the principal town of the island."

The man from Jamaica looked at Mr. Evans for a moment as if he thought the latter must be daft. Then he emphatically declared:

"I live in Jamaica, and there isn't a street in the town that bears the remotest resemblance to that picture."

The mention of Jamaica as a town cleared away the mist.

"I see," said Mr. Evans, "you live in Jamaica, N. Y., don't you?"

"Yes," replied the suburbanite. "Is there another Jamaica anywhere?"

They Lacked Team Work.

There was small respect in Captain Maybury's mind for the brains of the artists whom he and his wife harbored and fed during the summer. "They are a well meaning lot of folks as ever lived," he said confidentially to a neighbor, "but when it comes to common sense every last living one of 'em needs a guardeen."

"Act kind o' crazy, I reckon," said the neighbor.

"Well, 'tain't so much that," admitted Captain Maybury, "as 'tis that they lack gumption and sprawl. Two of 'em were talking to me about the 'sunset light' last night. 'We work fast as we can, but we can't ketch it,' they told me. 'It fades so fast, and before you know it the glow is dead.'

"I've got some used to their queer talk, but that did seem plumb foolish. 'If two of you can't ketch it,' I says, 'why in tunket don't the whole eight of you set to work together, same as if you had a fence to paint?' But if you'll believe me, I could tell by their looks they'd never thought of such a thing before. They're simple, that's what they are."—Youth's Companion.

The Old Time Almanac.

"It is astonishing what faith the old school farmer used to put in his almanac," said a farmer of the new school, a graduate of an agricultural college.

"My father was an old school farmer, and in June he would consult his almanac to see if we were going to have a clear Christmas. What though the almanac usually went back on him? Sometimes its predictions were true, and one accurate prophecy counterbalanced in my father's mind fifty miscures.

"Once I crossed the ocean with the old man. We sat at the captain's table, and the first night out my father, laying down his spoon, said anxiously:

"'Captain, hev ye got an almanac on board?'

"'No,' the captain answered.

"The old man frowned and shook his head.

"'Then, by gosh,' he said, 'we'll jest hev to take the weather as she comes.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Dickens and His Beard.

Frith painted Charles Dickens' portrait when the novelist began to grow a beard and told this anecdote of the occasion:

"Well, one day when Dickens was sitting the servant came up to tell me Sir Edwin Landseer was below. Dickens said, 'Let's have him up; he hasn't seen my beard and mustache yet.' Charles Landseer and Edwin had been abroad for some time together in Italy, and they hadn't all met for months. Edwin came up and took no notice of the beard, and at last Dickens said: 'Well, Lanny, what about all this? D'you like it? Think it's an improvement?' 'Oh, a great improvement,' Landseer said quite gravely. 'It hides so much of your face.' Dickens wasn't the least offended. He'd let 'Lanny' say anything."

All Were Prime Ministers.

An eminent surgeon was once sent for by Cardinal Du Bois, prime minister of France, to perform a very serious operation upon him. The cardinal said to him, "You must not expect to treat me in the same rough manner as you treat your poor, miserable wretches at your Hotel Dieu."

"My lord," replied the surgeon, with great dignity, "every one of those miserable wretches, as your eminence is pleased to call them, is a prime minister in my eyes."—Success Magazine.

Farewell the Day

Harvey's Fire

By Lulu Johnson.

Copyrighted, 1908, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

Under the winter moon the snow gleamed as brilliantly as if some giant hand had sprinkled powdered diamonds upon the smooth, white crust. Here and there gaunt, naked trees spread black shadows, and the lines of fence blocked the glittering expanse into regular squares.

But the beauty of a perfect night was lost on Harvey Grantley as he stood in the library window peering through the frosted glass.

Harvey saw only the big house on the hill, with its lights gleaming through the great windows. The owner of that house, Burden Porter, had a fancy for leaving the curtains up so that the lights might stream out unchecked by holland shade or damask fabric.

He liked to see the place ablaze with light at night, and the suggestion of cheer warmed his heart as he approached it in the winter evenings. And the Porter house was at the very top of the hill, where it could be seen for miles around.

"THANK GOD YOU ARE SAFE!" HE CRIED.

Tonight the brilliant lights brought no suggestion of warmth and cheer to Harvey. Indeed he did not notice the lights save to wonder in which room Amy might be.

The chances were that she was in the music room, from which shone the softer lights of shaded lamps. She might be sitting there playing softly to herself the old airs that she loved so well. He, too, loved to sit quietly, listening to the old melodies and enjoying the glint of lamplight on the brown hair and the soft warmth of flesh tones.

But that was all over now. Never again would he sit there in the music room. The old songs that she loved to croon would no longer bring him pleasure. They could only serve now to recall the happy days of the past, for he and Amy had quarreled and parted with the vow that the other must be the first to ask pardon.

He was certain that he would never acknowledge a fault of which he was not conscious, and he knew equally well that it would be idle to expect her to speak first.

He looked out across the fields and vaguely planned to go on a trip. He did not know where he wanted to go, but it should be where he would never even hear of Brookfield again. He could never live on there, passing Amy every day and never speaking.

In a sudden frame of anger he declared he was glad it was all over. He was glad that he was free to go whither he might. But his eyes turned longingly toward the house on the hill even as he mentally recited his declaration of independence.

And as he looked there came a flash of blinding light, followed by a rosy glare, and presently a cloud of smoke drifted above the house, gleaming white as it soared into the moonlight above the shadow of the roof. A fire had been started, probably by the explosion of a lamp.

With no thought of the quarrel, Harvey caught up his hat and coat and dashed out of the house. There was a short cut across the fields, and he made for the gap in the hedge through which he was accustomed to slip. It cut half a mile off the trip to the house, and he could cover the distance in five minutes, though it was a steep climb in places.

As he ran he thought of a thousand possible accidents, but always Amy was the central figure in the tableau of horror. He could see her wrapped in flaming oil soaked garments. He could see the whole house ablaze through the explosion of the boiler that fed the heating system, with Amy cowering at the top of the blazing stairway.

His active brain devised a hundred horrors as he rushed blindly on. A clump of firs cut off his view of the house, and he could see nothing above the dark shadows of the grove.

The crust was hard and slippery

More than once he went crashing to his knees, only to pick himself up and hurry onward. He had almost gained the thicket of firs and was climbing through the last tangle of brush against the fence when a dainty form emerged from the shadows and came toward him.

For an instant his blood chilled as he thought that this perhaps might be Amy's ghost. The quarrel had made a deep impression upon his sensitive imagination, and the idea did not seem absurd to his overwrought mind, but as the figure advanced he could see that this was no creation of the spirit, but substantial flesh and blood.

"Thank God you are safe!" he cried. "Are you going for help?"

"I am going skating, and I don't need any help, thank you," was the saucy response, tempered by a rippling laugh.

"But the house is on fire," expostulated Harvey.

"Not at all," declared Amy. "What gave you that idea?"

She eyed him sharply and moved away. His face was scratched and bleeding, his hat was tilted at a most rakish angle, and his wild look and labored breathing testified to his mental excitement.

"I saw the flash of an explosion and the glare of flames, and I hurried to your relief," explained Harvey.

"Then you do care," cried Amy, "in spite of what you said this afternoon?"

"I had forgotten this afternoon," he answered simply. "I only knew that you were in danger."

"And you came to my aid," she said softly, but her voice grew sharper as she added, "And did you purpose waiting until I cried for help and spoke first before you rescued me?"

"I told you that I had forgotten that," he said reproachfully. "I did speak first, didn't I?"

"You did," she admitted, "and for that I shall tell you what the fire was. It was a combination of flashlight and red fire. It was Teddy trying an experiment for those private theatricals the boys of the school are getting up. It was a realistic fire effect, even to the smoke. There was too much of that. We had to open all the windows, and I am going out skating to keep warm."

"And I have had all my excitement for nothing?" he asked ruefully.

"As usual," retorted Amy, "just as I told you this afternoon."

"I admit it," said Harvey humbly. "May I come skating with you?"

"The ice is free," was the ambiguous reply. "I hate to put on my own skates."

"I'll get my skates and be at the lake by the time you are," was the joyful response as Harvey went rushing down the hill again.

For a moment Amy leaned against the fence and watched the hurrying figure. She was very fond of Harvey in spite of his impetuosity, and a smile played about her lips as she slowly made her way toward the lake.

Harvey was already there, skating up and down impatiently, and as she came down the bank he knelt to adjust her skates.

"I'm sorry that I was such a fool this afternoon," he said humbly as he tugged at the straps.

"I'm sorry you were, too," was the uncompromisingly reply.

"If you had been burned to death," he went on with a shudder, "I never should forgive myself. It's taught me a lesson."

"I'm glad it has," said Amy. Then something in his utter humility of speech and attitude touched her.

"Will you keep a secret if I tell you?" she demanded. Harvey nodded.

"I was coming to ask you if you wanted to go skating when I met you," confessed Amy.

Harvey looked up, hope illuminating his face. The red lips were very near his own, so forgiveness was sealed with a kiss.

Cairo Named For a Crow.

Cairo received its name from the accidental settling of a crow upon a certain string. The naming of the place dates from the year 969, when Goher, a Tunis general, invaded Egypt and prepared to found a new city there.

"The architect, having made arrangements for laying the first stone of the new wall, waited for the fortunate moment, which was to be shown by the astrologers pulling a cord extending to a considerable distance from the spot. A certain crew, however, who had not been taken into the council of the wise men, perched upon the cord, which was shaken by his weight, and the architect, supposing that the appointed signal had been given, commenced his work accordingly. From this unlucky omen and the vexation felt by those concerned the epithet of Kahira (the vexatious or unlucky) was added to the name of the city, Masr el Kahira, meaning 'the unlucky city of Egypt.'" Kahira in the Italian pronunciation has been softened into Cairo.

Because Washington Is Dead.

One of the most impressive of the ceremonies prescribed in the chapter on "Honors and Distinctions" of the United States navy regulations is that to be followed when a vessel of the navy, on its way up or down the Potomac river, passes Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon. Unfortunately the observance of this ceremonial is limited to smaller ships, as for such only is the Potomac at this point navigable. The smaller cruisers and gunboats that occasionally visit Washington for presidential inauguration or similar events observe the ceremonial so strictly that it would seem through infrequent occurrence it gains in interest. When any naval vessel approaches Mount Vernon the marine guard and the band are paraded, the ship's bell is tolled and the colors half masted. When opposite Washington's tomb the bugles sound "taps," the marine guard presents arms, and all officers and men stand at attention and salute.—Harper's Weekly.

Motion of the Sun.

Owing to the revolution of the earth the sun seems to make its daily circuit around us, which of course is not the case. But the sun is revolving about its center quite as truly as the earth is. It was one of the conceptions of that most remarkable man, Sir John Herschel, that the whole solar system had a motion in space and was advancing toward a point in the heavens near the star Hercules. Sir John's conception—as bold an idea as ever entered the human mind—is now generally accepted by astronomers, and the opinion is quite universal among them that the entire system is tracing out a curvilinear path in space, a course around some mighty center, probably at Hercules.

Good Enough to Charge For.

When William H. Scott was managing clerk in the early sixties for the firm of Cleveland & Titus, a client came in and wanted an opinion right away. No member of the firm was in. Accordingly, Mr. Scott, with some hesitation, wrote the opinion. When his principal, Mr. Cleveland, came in, he explained the circumstances and showed him the opinion. Mr. Cleveland looked at him with a smile and then read it with care. "Humph," said he; "pretty poor opinion, but it will do to charge."—New York Times.

A Caustic Reply.

A gentleman once said to a barrister, "That was a very good sermon of your father's today." To which he replied: "Yes. He must have cribbed it from some one." But the father overheard this remark and reminded him that the Bible says, "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib." This caustic reply silenced the barrister.—London Telegraph.

The Rapid Rise of Clive.

The evidences of Clive's genius, said Lord Curzon, were incontestable. In nine years he had risen from being a poor and unknown clerk to be one of the most famous captains of his own or any other age.

His Early Struggles.

"Tell me about your early struggles, grandpa."

"Oh, I never had no early struggles, Johnny. I allus took things jest as they come."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Girl Advertises for Work, not Admirers

Miss Julia C. Dunkirk, of Indianapolis has inserted this advertisement in a Chicago newspaper:

"I want to be somebody's stenographer or book-keeper, not his sweetheart. I have been in Chicago three days answering want ads, and I've had more chances to be 'somebody's darling' than I ever knew existed. If there is a man in Chicago who needs help and would rather have a girl attending to business than making goo-goo eyes, I should like to hear from him. I already have a sweetheart of my own."

Asked about her search for work, the girl, who is pretty, said:

"In one office a baldheaded man, who really looked nice, asked me to be seated.

"'Stenographer, I presume?' he began.

"'Yes, sir,' I replied.

"'Do you live with your people?' he asked

"'I am alone.'

"'How interesting!' he said. 'I am very much alone myself. My wife doesn't care to go out, and I have a lot of time at my disposal.'

"'But I am a stenographer,' I ventured.

"'Spirited!' he said.' I like it. You have a pretty hand,' and he reached out to take it.

"I escaped."

Its Coming Sure, Coming Fast.

No one can fail to see that a flowing tidal wave against the liquor traffic is sweeping over our country.

No power on earth can stay the progress of the oncoming tide. It can be seen also in other countries. Within a few days, in London, England, the different temperance organizations united their forces forming "A Universal Prohibition Temperance Federation." A ocal movement of this sort is already started here in Bellefonte not knowing at the time, what was begun in London. Without reference to partisan political affiliation, our legal, medical and mercantile professions are represented in the Committee calling for the mass meeting to be held in the Court House nex Thursday, February 6th. It is hardly necessary to say that all of our church officials are in league with the U. P. T. Federation. The success of this significant movement seems to be assured Deo juvante.

I expect to live long enough to see the sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage orever prohibited. SENEX.

—While at present Bellefonte is having her share of the hard times so far as works being closed down are concerned, there are indications that the depression here will not last long. In fact it is stated upon pretty reliable authority that some of the industries will resume work in the near future while it is expected that everything will be in full blast by the first of April.

—William Wycoff, a 10-year-old Williamsport boy, narrowly escaped drowning in the river at that place Wednesday. The lad broke through the ice and was floundering about in the chilly waters for quite a while, the ice breaking each time he tried to get out. Three young men who were near at hand got a board and making a human chain finally reached the drowning boy with a pole, and pulled him from the water to safety.

—The jury commissioners of Venango county at their last drawing took from the wheel the name of Fayette P. Hankey, of Oil City, as one of the jurors for a coming term of court in that county. When the Sheriff went to Oil City to serve the notice on the juror he found that a woman had been drawn. Miss Hankey is a school teacher. As only voters are permitted to sit as jurors in Pennsylvania the official notified the lady that she needn't attend court.

—We are sorry to note that Miss Grace Shook, one of the efficient employees of this office, is confined to her home with something like grip.

—We are glad to note, that Mr. Thos. E. Mayes, train dispatcher at the C. R. R. of Pa. who has been housed up several days with the grip is able to be out again.

—Winter doesn't seem to be over yet. The last few days have been pretty cool and as a crowning success to prove that we are having winter we have had quite a nice snow-fall.

—Your sons and daughters are now molding the future of Bellefonte. Are you assisting them to mold their lives in such a manner that they may be enabled to make the town better, livelier and larger?

—The C. R. R. of Pa. passenger train due here at 9:45 on Saturday evening stuck in a snow drift at Zion and did not get into town until nearly noon on Sunday. It required four engines to take it through the drift.

—C. N. Meserve has a flock of thirty five thoroughbred Rhode Island Red and Barred Rock Pullets, that produced 535 eggs in January. The largest number of eggs for one day was twenty-five and the smallest number was eleven. The flock contained five hens that are confirmed setters so the actual work was done by thirty pullets.

—Monday morning at about 6:15 three engines arrived in this town from Sunbury, when they started at midnight. The front engine had a snow shovel attached, while a work train was in the rear. They had a few pretty good drifts to plough through. The snow-plow engine and another returned to Sunbury ahead of the regular L. & T. freight.

—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Cook have arrived in Los Angeles, Cal., and letters received from them by friends in this place say that almost the first person they met upon their arrival in that city was Dr. Tom Orbison, an old Bellefonte boy. —Dr. A. W. Hafer, the dentist, has been compelled to give up his practice for the present on account of his eyes. For some time past he has been troubled with a cataract on his left eye which finally entirely obscured the vision and it has now grown so bad that the sight of the right eye has become affected. Upon the advice of his physician he had given up work and will rest his eyes for a few days then go to the Wills Eye hospital Philadelphia for an operation and treatment.

—On Friday night death claimed Jackson Bush of Potter street, a man with many friends throughout the county. His death was due to the infirmities of old age. Deceased was a blacksmith by trade and had farmed in several sections of the county. During the last two or three years he has been a desirable resident of this town. The funeral services were held from the house this morning. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

At two p. m. the people gathered at the house and from there the body was conveyed to the church. The mother and child were placed in the same coffin to be laid away to rest. Many people attended the services which were solemn and impressive. The pall bearers were Harold Kirk, Christ Young, Joe Thal, Andrew Thal, David Barlett, and Edward Gingher.

—On Saturday evening a team of horses, hooked to a heavy bob sled, were coming into town with one of Green Watson's boys lying on the sled in a very drunken condition and whose bloody appearance would have suggested that he had been in a fight. The horses were stopped at the corner of Thomas and High streets when Harvey Stine noticed the fellow and asked him if he wanted to go to his home at Wallace Run. He said that he did and in a short time Harvey had the team turned and started toward his home. It is very likely that the man was nearly frozen when he got to his home.

—The repair work on Wm. L. Steel's residence is going right along.

—The Y. M. C. A. had a very successful Bible Club supper on Tuesday evening.

—On Tuesday evening a merry sled load of our young folks had a party out near Pleasant Gap.

—The M. M. C. girls, a club of our jolly young ladies gathered at the home of Miss Elsie Bittle where they all enjoy a first class time.

—The engagement of Miss Kate Cocette Gould, daughter of Mrs. Mary Gould, of Atlantic City, to Forest N. McGee, of Philadelphia, has been announced. This will interest many Bellefonte people who are acquainted with Mr. McGee, who was a former resident here.

—An Illinois poultry breeder has evolved a rooster with four wings. The odd pair grow out immediately in front of the regular ones and point in the opposite direction. Here we have a combination that may work to advantage. This rooster can fly either way at will. Poised, like a "snake doctor" or dragon fly, if danger approaches he may dart in the direction where safety lies If such a breed can be enlarged and perpetuated there will be other advantages. There will be four wing pieces to be divided at the table instead of the regulation two, and, of course, such a bird will produce more feathers. All hail the four-winged fowls.

Young Men's Bible Study Club.

Shoots Bride for Going to Church.

"You choose between your religion and me," shouted 21-year-old Harry Webber, of Lisbon, O., at church time, as he confronted his bride of four weeks almost at the door of the Lisbon, O., Disciples' church.

The young wife stepped to one side to enter the church and, Webber, drawing a revolver, fired two shots at her, then put a bullet into his own brain. Webber died in half an hour. The little bride soon followed.

Webber was the son of George Webber, a merchant. A month ago the young man married 20-year-old Anna Woelfel, at Beaver Falls, Pa. The wife was an ardent member of the church, while the young man was a non-believer. Neighbors heard them quarreling frequently because she gave so much time to her Sunday school and church societies, and he forbade her attending the morning service.

She disobeyed and he followed her down the street, confronting her at the house of worship Witnesses to the shooting were powerless to interfere.

To Those Who Have and Can Give.

We know there are citizens in our town who have and will continue to help to relieve those in need. The severity of the weather reveals the fact that there are some young people in our town who would be helped much by a donation of clothing. Some need under wear, some over shoes and some other articles. The charitably inclined can ascertain where this help is most needed by inquiring of the Principal or the teachers of the schools. Who will help out?

The object of the society is the social, moral and commercial betterment of the members and to keep alive the spirit of the home state. Woman's Wild Ride.

A woman was the lone occupant of a passenger coach, which, breaking from the engine on a steep mountain grade of the Pittsburg, Westmoreland & Somerset railroad near Somerset, on Wednesday shot down the hill and leaped from the rails into a stream.

When the train composed of an engine, freight car and a passenger coach, reached the top of the grade, the car became uncoupled from the engine and dashed backward.

Two men and Mrs. Mae Neff, of Somerset, were the only passengers. Before the cars had gained great momentum, the men ran to the platform and dropped off, leaving Mrs. Neff to her fate.

The woman did not lose her nerve, as the cars, rocking violently, sped down the grade. When nearly a mile from the starting point the woman saw an open derailing switch at a curve. A moment later the cars were flying through the air but Mrs. Neff prepared herself for the crash by crouching on the floor and grasping the seat supporters on each side of the aisle.

The freight car behind, which she feared might telescope the coach, was deflected and it dashed to one side.

Though bleeding from cuts and chilled by the icy water in which the car lodged, Mrs. Neff emerged clinging from the debris and started back up the track. When she met the two men coming to search for her body she laughed.

Death of H. A. Witherite.

Henry A. Witherite was the son of the late A. C. Witherite and his wife Lydia who still survives; and was a resident of Boggs township near Runville; died of paralysis on Jan. 30th A. D. 1908, aged 53 years 2 months and 9 days. His wife Anna L., their son Willis A. and family and their daughter Eva B., with his aged mother and his only sister, Mrs. Alice Rogers and her husband of Osceola, are his immediate survivors. Mr. Witherite was a man of sterling qualities, of a mild and amible dispositions, reticent in conversation, a man of few words, and good judgement, would say what he meant, and meant what he said, an honest man, generous, and neighborly when solicited, a man of high moral accomplishments, one of the men the world needs, was in his social relations all that a husband and father could be, His worth was highly appreciated by his neighbors who did all in their power to make him comfortable during his protracted illness, as well as to lessen the burden of his wife and children whose gratitude they richly share. His remains were laid away in the Messiah's cemetery on Sunday Feb. 2nd 1908, Rev. J. Zeigler administering the last sad rites.

Considering the blizzard tenderness of the weather the attendance was good. The bereaved friends share of deepest sympathy and condolence.

Tried and Found Wanting.

The absolute block signal system for all trains has been tried and abandoned on the Sunbury division of the Pennsylvania railroad. It was found entirely inadequate to meet the conditions of the road. Although fairly satisfactory for passenger trains and fast freights, it was entirely unsatisfactory for slow freight. In the absolute block system only one train is allowed on a block at a time. On a single track road such as the Sunbury division it can readily be seen how the slow freight will impede the other traffic.

The system was put into effect on the Susquehanna division Monday and will be given a thorough trial. It has been tried on most of the other divisions on the system and is being with-drawn, as it is not coming up to the expectations of the officials. It was found that there is too much freight to permit this system to remain in operation, as it would cause a block in the traffic.
